

2019 DISCLOSURE REGARDING ENGAGING ON POLICY AND SOCIAL ISSUES

TRADE ASSOCIATIONS IN ENERGY AND UTILITY SECTORS

Trade associations often serve as a voice for our industry, with many being key advocates for and enablers of cleaner energy. Trade associations leverage the collective resources, know-how and experience of their members to collaborate, share knowledge and educate key stakeholders, including regulators and legislators. Below is a list of trade associations to which the Fortis organization contributed at least C$25,000 in 2019.

OTHER NON-PROFITS

Fortis supports other tax-exempt organizations that advocate on policy issues of relevance to the utility industry, such as renewable energy and electrification of transportation, and other issues of social significance. Below is a list of tax-exempt organizations which may engage in lobbying or political activity to which Fortis contributed in 2019. Due to the large number of tax-exempt entities to which we contribute and in order to focus our disclosure on those that are most likely to engage in public policy advocacy of interest to our stakeholders, we have excluded certain categories of organizations, including chambers of commerce; local economic development organizations; municipalities/counties; regional planners; first responders; professional organizations and governing bodies; pure research, educational or historical organizations; standards organizations; and political and government organizations.
